Philosophy is not higher and suprascientific. It is the lowest and grubbiest inquiry round the roots of things, and when it answers real questions about the world, it is and can only be an inductive science.

D. C. Williams

Principles of Empirical Realism, p. 147.