

PHIL 458.001/558.001: The Ethics of Climate Crisis

Dr. Emily McRae

This seminar explores the philosophical implications of crisis, particularly the global climate and ecological crises. We will investigate ethical, social, and psychological issues that arise in the context of climate crisis, including issues of moral and political responsibility, climate anxiety, individual vs. collective action, possibilities for human relationships with nature, and forward-looking responses to crises. This class is writing intensive; class discussion and participation is expected and encouraged.
